

I'm an Algerian rower living in France to improve my rowing skills. My name is Sid BOUDINA, I'm a 32 and been rowing for 17 years.

As a lightweight rower, I started rowing competitively in Africa and I became African champion 9 times, medalist on several international championships, was a medalist in the last world indoor rowing championships, and have rowed in the last two Olympic Games on men's lightweight double sculls.

I am now applying to the Olympic Commission to become the new African ambassador to FISA. I would love to represent the African continent to put the spotlight on the local rowers.

Passionated about rowing, I would like to help guiding fellow rowers on the right path to achieve great results on the international scene. The nurturing of the future generation of athletes is crucial to the development of a strong and diverse international rowing community and I wish that together we can work towards that goal and develop rowing in Africa.
